

Detroit native Timothy Paul Jackson is an experienced Non-Profit leader. After learning about the importance of pollinator conservation, Timothy co-founded Detroit Hives; a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization, whose mission is improve the quality of life for people and pollinators, by converting vacant lots into educational bee farms.

For over seven years, Timothy has used the art of urban beekeeping to create a social, environmental and financial impact within Detroit's underserved communities. Under his leadership, he has educated thousands of inner city youth through their Bee The Change Program, Founded National Urban Beekeeping Day, and manages the health of over 4.5 million honeybees in Detroit.

Timothy is also a proud member of Omega Psi Phi Fraternity, Inc., American Beekeeping Federation, Southeastern Michigan Beekeepers Association, Michigan Beekeepers Association, Michigan Wildflower Association, Bee Ambassador of the Honeybee Conservancy, and 1st Vice President of Keep Michigan Beautiful.